

EMA Call for Applications 2026/2027

1. PRESENTATION

The European Master's Programme in Human Rights and Democratisation (EMA), organised by the Global Campus of Human Rights, is a one-year post-graduate course that provides a practice and policy-oriented approach to learning that combines legal, political, historical, anthropological, philosophical and cultural perspectives of human rights and democratisation with skill building activities and a field trip exercise. The EMA Programme is co-designed and co-implemented by 43 participating universities representing all EU Member States and the United Kingdom. It is managed by the Global Campus of Human Rights. The University of Padua, Italy, assumes the role of university of first enrolment on behalf of the consortium.

Students are taught by leading academics representing EMA participating universities, experts and representatives of international organisations (for example the European Union and the Council of Europe) and NGOs while studying in an international environment.

Upon completion of all course components, EMA graduates will have gained both academic and practical skills: on the one hand, the ability to conduct independent and interdisciplinary academic research in relation to human rights and democratisation issues; on the other hand, skills which are relevant to human rights practitioners such as reporting, fact-finding and project management.

2. CONTENTS OF THE EMA PROGRAMME

FIRST AND SECOND SEMESTER

The academic year of the EMA Programme is divided into two semesters: the first semester (September to February) in Venice-Lido and the second (February to July) at an EMA participating university situated in the European Union and the United Kingdom. The second part of the programme is conceived as a university exchange, which means that students will be hosted for the second semester activities in a university in which they have not previously enrolled in degree level education, and which is located in a country in which they a) do not hold citizenship and b) have not resided or carried out their main activity for more than 12 months in the previous 36 months immediately prior to the date of enrolment.

The EMA Programme, being multidisciplinary and wide-ranging, includes lectures, seminars, workshops, tutorials, skill-building sessions and individual research.

The EMA first semester curriculum consists of a core programme, made up of thematic sections (the first stream) held in plenary with all students, and a series of second stream activities consisting of classes devised for smaller groups.

First stream courses are organised in thematic sections as indicated below (they are subject to modification):

- TS1: Human Rights Institutions, Mechanisms and Standards (United Nations; Council of Europe; EU; OSCE; Organisation of American States; African system; perspectives on Asia);
- TS2: Globalisation, Development and Human Rights (Stakeholders in Economic Globalisation: States, International Economic Organisations, Companies, NGOs; Human Rights and Development; Business and Human Rights; Economic, Social and Cultural Rights);
- TS3: Human Rights in Context: Historical, Philosophical, Religious and Anthropological Perspectives;

- TS4: Building and Protecting Democracy (Regime Change and Democratic Consolidation; Transition and Transformation Processes; Governance; Political Participation; Electoral Processes)
- TS5: Human Rights, Peace and Security + Field Trip (Humanitarian Law; International Criminal Law; Human Security and Crisis Response; Human Rights in the Field; Human Rights and Security). In the a.y. 2026/2027 students will also participate in a field trip to Kosovo.

Second stream courses consist of different components such as a series of Cluster classes that foster advanced knowledge of specialist human rights issues; rolling seminars on international law, philosophy and international relations; sessions on academic skills; and some semester-long special projects in which students organise human rights and democracy related events, e.g. the EMA student-led film festival.

During the EMA second semester students relocate to one of the 43 participating universities to follow courses in an area of specialisation of their own choice and to undertake supervised research for their master's thesis.

3. ASSESSMENT

First semester assessment comprises written and oral assignments and in-class exams. Only those students who successfully pass the first semester are allowed to proceed to the second semester. During the second semester, students attend further specialised courses, the assessment of which is based on the practices of the hosting universities. During the second semester students also prepare a research thesis under the supervision of the second semester university.

4. DEGREE

After successfully passing exams and completing a master's thesis, students will be awarded the "European Master's Degree in Human Rights and Democratisation", which is worth 60 ECTS credits. The diploma is jointly conferred by the universities of the Global Campus of Human Rights/EMA network that have ratified the Joint Degree Agreement. These are called 'Inner Circle Universities'.

Graduates receive one of two versions of the joint diploma, which is based on the number of ECTS credits or an equivalent thereof that candidates held at the time of admission (either 180 ECTS or 240 ECTS), which in turn are required for admission to postgraduate programmes in the Inner Circle Universities, according to the relevant national or other applicable legal framework:

- The Universities of Graz, Padua, and Ca' Foscari Venice issue the EMA Diploma to students who are enrolled in the EMA programme holding a university degree of 180 ECTS credits or recognised as equivalent thereto;
- The Universities of Graz, Padua, Ca' Foscari Venice, Deusto (Bilbao), Ruhr-University Bochum, Hamburg, and Ljubljana issue the EMA diploma to students who are enrolled in the EMA programme with a university degree of at least 240 ECTS credits or recognised as equivalent thereto.

The national equivalent value attributed to the EMA Joint Programme varies among the Inner Circle Universities as follows:

- for the Italian universities (Padua, and Ca' Foscari University Venice) the EMA Degree corresponds to a "Master Universitario di primo livello" (see DM 270/2004);

- for Ruhr-University Bochum the EMA Degree corresponds to a Master's title as envisaged by paragraph 66, Hochschulgesetz (HG) 16.9.2014;
- for the University of Deusto – Bilbao the EMA Degree corresponds to a “Master Universitario” recognised by the Real Decreto 822/2021 de 28 de septiembre;
- for the University of Graz the EMA Degree corresponds to a Master's title recognised by the UG 2002 (BGBl I nr. 120/2002);
- for Hamburg University the EMA Degree corresponds to § 1 Abs. 2 der Prüfungsordnung für den Masterstudiengang “Peace and Security Studies - (M.A.)” vom 26. Januar 2022.
- for the University of Ljubljana, the EMA Degree corresponds to a Master degree, magistrski št. druge št., mag. člov. prav. in demo. according to the Odločba Sveta NAKVIS št. 6034-46/2015/15, Master of Arts (M.A.).

A student can withdraw from the Programme at any time by presenting a specific request. Upon withdrawal, the student is not entitled to a refund of the security deposit or tuition fee.

12. CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

Having obtained the EMA Diploma, many graduates find job opportunities with human rights organisations (both governmental and non-governmental, international and national), which might put them to work in field missions (electoral observation, human rights monitoring, international cooperation projects) or as officials taking care of the activities carried out at headquarters. In a number of cases, graduates are involved in human rights-related activities by their home Ministries of Foreign Affairs or are seconded by them to work for international institutions. In many cases, access to these institutions starts with an internship period. Some graduates pursue further academic studies and research.

The Global Campus of Human Rights facilitates the entry of its graduates in the human rights job market through a successful placement programme: the EMA Internship Programme. Every year since 1998/1999 the Global Campus of Human Rights, with the support of the European Union, has awarded a paid internship in the field of human rights to the 15 students who have achieved the highest results during each academic year. EMA Internships last five months.

13. SUPPORTING INSTITUTIONS

EMA is primarily financed by the European Union* through the Global Campus of Human Rights. The Global Campus of Human Rights premises are made available by the Municipality of Venice. EMA also collaborates with UNESCO, the United Nations Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights, and benefits from close cooperation with the Council of Europe, the OSCE and other international organisations.

The EMA Programme is further enriched by the input of representatives of non-governmental organisations such as, among others, Human Rights Watch, the International Commission of Jurists, the International Rehabilitation Council for Torture Victims. All these organisations are members of the Global Campus of Human Rights, thus providing their expertise to the EMA management on a continuous basis.
